Acoustic Dimensions served this highly regarded New York City audio-for-video production facility for several years as consultants in the design and construction of six edit and audio suites. AD also provided design services related to the modification of a major film dubbing stage (pictured) and numerous edit suites.

Centrally located in midtown Manhattan's historic Brill Building, Sound One is the preeminent audio post-production company on the east coast. The facility features multiple re-recording studios, ADR studios, and a Foley studio, for most of which Acoustic Dimensions provided acoustic design and construction services. The space are exceptionally quiet, both in terms of background and intrusive noise, and provide superior listening environments that support the most critical audio production requirements.
